Reporter-May other cities of the South besides Louisville expect to receive you? Gen. Grant-No; at least not at present. I expect to pass most of the winter with my family, either in Cuba or Mexico.

Reporter-Have you been correctly reported as stating that you would sceept the Presidency of the Nicaraugua canal under certain conditions?

General Grant--In the main, yes. Those conditions would require that the scheme should be put on so permanent a financial basis that its failure would be impossible. I have always had a deep interest in it; I believe it of vital interest to all nations that this work be consummated. National Associated Press to the Star.

CANTON, MISS., Nov. 18.-The notorious Eliza Pinkston is now in our County Jail, having been arrested and confined there on Saturday last under the suspicion of killing her late husband, Weyland Prichard, coiored. The deceased came to his death very suddenly on the morning of the 15th, at Calhoun, eight miles south of this place.

He and Eliza had been married about two years, and for some months past have lived very unhappily together, frequently quarreling. They quarreled about two weeks ago, and since that have lived spart. She sought him on Friday last, and they quarreled again. The jury of inquest are still in session over the case, and have not made their report as yet. All the circumstances point to Eliza as the author of her late husband's death.

THE AMBROSE MATTER.

Decision of the District and Circuit

At the opening of the United Sates Court, this morning, District Judge P. B. Swing and Circuit Judge J. Baxter delivered their written opinions on the subject of accepting Clerk Ambrose's resignation. The following was first read by Judge Swing:

"On Saturday at 3 o'clock Thomas Ambrose, Clerk of the District and Circuit Courts of the United States for this Southern District of Ohio, tendered his resignation. No action was taken at the time for the reason that I desired conference and consultation with the Circuit Judge. After full consultation and mature deliberation the conclusion to which we have arrived is that the resignation of said Clerk be accepted, to take effect when his successor shall be appointed."

Judge Baxter then read the following:
"It has been said that it was known that I would not accept Mr. Ambrose's resigna-tion if tendered. This is a mistake. I have authorized no such declaration. On the contrary I fully concur with Judge Swine in the acceptance of his resignation. I certainly would not concur if its acceptance in the Club rooms at 1 p. m.

He then returned to Colonel Grant's house for a brief rest, and at 3 o'clock will again appear in public at the Protestant Orphan Asylum, on Michigan avenue. The General, Mrs. Grant and Colonel and Mrs. Grant will be the guests of General and Grant will be guest of Gener develop as proper and necessary in the premises. But as I understand the law he would be just as amountle for unlawful acts, if he has perpetrated any, after as before the acceptance of his resignation, and it is in this view of the law a plicable to his case that the Court, after a full and free discussion and review of the case, have con-curred in the conclusion that it is our du y to accept the resignation tendered.

"Further than this the Court ought not to be expected to go. The District Attorney has officially notified us of the institution of criminal proceedings by the Government grainst Mr. Ambrose. This prosecution will probably be pushed to a trial. If tried it will be the duty of one or both of us to preside at the trial. We ought, therefore to be as far removed from preconceived mpressi as a practicable, for while within the limits of the judicial duties conferred in us by the law it will become our duty to see that we emitty man escapes? The wound is character in this community, we trust, will now. It will be for the Government, through its officials charged with the duty, to determine what else, if anything, shall be done, and for this Court, in case either criminal or civil suit shall be prosecuted against Ar. Ambrose, to see that the law is fully and effectually administered. "Complaint has been made hat persons have been denied access to the books and records of the Court. Application was made a few days ago to my associate, the District Judge, for an order compelling the clerk to give to the parties applying an opce. This question was argued and disposed of by my brother Judge. The arguments and decision relate to the legal rights of the citizen to inspect the public records of the Court I do not take issue with any principle annou ced by the District Judge in reference to the question then involved. But in consultation we agree that this is not a case for the application of technical law. The examination proposed professes to be in the public interest. No injury can result to any one from such examina show that there are others which ought to be exposed. We think we ought to accept all the aid tendered in good faith. Exposures of peculations by officers upon the Government, without regard to t e animus that may prompt them, is in the public interest. With these convictions, we will, until a Clerk shall be appointed, confide the records to the keeping of the deputies now performing the duties of Clerk and direct that they gather all the records into the office and records into the office and afford to every citizen desiring to examine them every facility for so doing that can be extended consistently with the pr per discharge of their duties. It is our purpose to insure every necessary facility to any one feeling an interest in the matter for a full and to orough investigation.' Clerk Ambrose, who was arrested on the affidavit of Frank Broadwell, was brought before Commissioner Probasco this afternoon, but the question of the right of any one but the D.strict Attorney to e nduct the case was brought up, and after

HARRY HULSE.

Opening Statements of Counsel,

The trial of Harry Hulse for committing rape on little Hettie Hoberg on the 18th of Februar proceeded to-day before Judge Longworth and the following jury: C. E. Kemper, J. J. Smiley, H. A. Hamilton, George McGrezor, James Garrison, James for the State. He raid it was needless to remind the jury of the solemn character of the bligation they had assumed. The charge was an ugly and revolting one, a rape upon a child, so inhuman and unnatural an act as to be almost incredible.

ural an act as to be almost incredible.

The crime was committed in Millcreek Bott ms, and the State expected to trace the prisoner from 3 o'clock from the Clintanstreet School to this place in company with two girls. Witnesses would identify him as the man they had seen. After the child was brought home search was made for the prisoner, and it was not until a few days after that he was found in a cellar at his father's house, on the corner of Cutter and Wade streets. It was also claimed that he afterwards admitted his guilt.

The wife of the prisoner shed tears while the statement was being made.

Major Blackburn made the opening statement for the defense. He said that the terms applied to the pris ner by the prosecuting attorney did not addstrength to the charge or weakness to the defense. Countries are the charge or weakness to the defense. sel remarked that some of t e jurors probably knew the grandfather of this prisoner, who had been the honored Clerk of this Court, and he had a brother or uncle who also held a public position in this County.

If the prisoner had failen, it was his misfortune, but they should not begin the trial by presuming that he was a wretch and a mons er, but recollect they were trying a fellow-man, and judge him with that justice and mercy with which they hoped to be tried when they we e called before the Judge of Judges in the great day of reckon-

Counsel also stated that evidence would be given by the defense to show that at the time of the alleged offense the prisoner was not in the licality where it was com-nited, but was attending to his business at another place, where he was observed by those who know him. Counsel also cau-tioned the jury on the subject of the al-leged confessions of the prisoner.

He was tortured to make confessions at the Station-house, and was told by police-men if he would confess his guilt he would be pretected, but otherwise he might go to the devil, and the mob could do as they pleased with him. The conclusion of all is that he says before his God he never did commit the offense, if it was committed at
